Market today: A Break-out is not Visible in Short-term

(Thien Bui – Ext: 1321)

Both indices continued to rally. VNIndex performed better than it did yesterday, but it still depended majorly on some large-cap stocks. Market breadth was quite neutral. At the end of the day, the VNIndex gained 5.45 pts and approached the 830-point resistance. The HNXIndex also recovered for the second day in a row as it closed higher at 107.4 pts. However, liquidity did not show investor's positive sentiment on the current market.

Foreign investors net sold on both bourses. In the HSX, they net sold VND160 billion while on the HNX, they also net sold VND965 million.

Today's low liquidity could have implied a technical recovery. The VNIndex once again hit the 830-point resistance, which it failed to break out 3 times. We do not believe it will succeed in the short term.

With the ongoing earnings announcement, investors may find below a compilation of Q3 2017 earnings results of stocks in our coverage list with our analysts' viewpoints.

Technical Analysis Recommendation

Indexes kept going up strongly but the liquidity fell to a very low level. This might be a technical recovery and therefore, traders should lower the proportion of stock in the portfolio and then cover at lower prices.
