Market today: Market bounced back

(Phuong Nguyen – phuong.nh@vdsc.com.vn)

After 2 losing sessions to the support level of 1,400 points, today's market reversed. The green color lasted from the beginning to the end of the day. VN-Index gained by 33.19 points (+2.35%), closing at 1,446.77. Liquidity dropped sharply compared to the previous session. Total matched value reached VND 24,025 billion, down 33%. Foreign investors continued to be net buyers of nearly VND 300 billion.

Contrary to yesterday's, Banking sector witnessed a strong impact on the VN-Index, notably VCB (+2.94%), BID (+3.93%), TCB (+2.04%),... Besides, Real estate sector also contributed largely to the index's gain like VHM (+2.38%), VIC (+1.04%), DIG (+5.59%),... Oil & gas sectors also gained strongly such as PLX (+3.48%), PVD (+6.99%), PVS (+6.15%)... Additionally, Consumer, Securities, Basic materials, and Infrastructure services outperformed. Only a few losers affected VN-Index, namely HTN (-2.72%), CRE (-1.33%), STK (-2.3%), IDI (-6.76%), ...

Foreign investors continued to be net buyers on HOSE with the value of VND 299.5 billion. Significantly, VHM (138.25), FUEVFN (47.7), VCB (32.4), HCM (28.1), NKG (24.2). By contrast, HPG (72), VPB (68.23), NVL (66.33), KBC (41.7), GMD (36.4) were top selling stocks.

Contrary to the negative state in the previous session, VN-Index went up strongly, partly thanks to investors' expectation of the support zone of 1,400. Liquidity decreased compared to yesterday's and lower than 50 session average, this also indicates that investors are suspending strong selling pressure and expecting to the market's recovery. The highlight of today's session was that all 30 stocks in the VN30 basket closed in green, of which POW and VRE hit to the ceiling. The current recovery is being driven by large-cap stocks. The recovery inertia of VN-Index is still there, it's possible that the recovery span will be expanded in the near future. However, the following recovery will be slower and more difficult as the selling pressure is still hidden when the market tests the resistance zone of 1,460 - 1,480 points. Given a signal of a successful short-term recovery from the support zone, investors could expect a market recovery in the near future. However, the current signal is still not enough basis for us to change our cautious view on the market recently, temporarily investors should take advantage of the recovery span to restructure portfolio.

Technical Analyst Recommendations

The VN-Index made a recovery after 02 heavy loss sessions that pushed the index to the supporting zone of 1,400 points. The momentum for recovery still remains. However, the recovery will be slow and difficult as the selling pressure is strong around the resistance zone of 1,460 - 1,480 points. With the recovery signal from the supporting zone, investors can take advantage of the situation to restructure the portfolio to a reasonable level. However, investors should avoid over-buying as the risk is still high.
