Market today:* Watch Out for Bull Trap

(Hieu Nguyen – Ext: 1514)

Market breadth was positive with gainers outweighing losers 2 by 1, helping the VNIndex to climb 0.53% and closed at 776.17 points after two down sessions. Banking stocks returned to green, and steel and real estate stocks also rose. The increase of steel stocks can be explained by the recent recovery of steel prices, which could continue in the near future. Details of this issue can be found in today's AP.

Although SAB decreased by VND4,000, there were 22 other stocks in the VN30 that went up such as DHG (+ 4.5%), BMP (+ 2.5%), and notably HPG (+ 4%) whose price set a new peak in history. The VN30 increased sharply by 6.4 points to 751.39 points (+ 0.86%). Meanwhile, the VN30F1708 futures contract also increased 3.2 points to 748.9 points. As the maturity date of this contract came close (on Thursday, August 17), the contract price should move closely with the VN30 fluctuation. A misprice is hardly found at this time, thus it is likely that investors can only make money by betting on the up or downtrend of the index.

The VNIndex finally increased, but low liquidity remains a concern as the trading value on the HSX was still hovering below VND3,000 billion. In addition, the market seems to lack supporting information. Thus, today's rise is not likely to continue, and we still recommend investors to hold a large cash position at this time.
