Market today: The VN-Index set a 2017's Record Gain in One Session

(Hieu Nguyen – Ext: 1514)

The VN-Index surged up at the beginning of today's session and closed at a record gain of 10.28 points (+1.4%). Although the number of gainers and decliners is on par, impressive performances of large caps including PLX (+6.9%), GAS (+3.9%), VNM (+1.6%) and banking stocks made the session become exciting. The market continued to witness a high liquidity (the trading value on the HSX reached VND5,000 billion) and strong inflows from foreign investors, which is VND467 billion mainly flowing to ROS, PLX, VNM, HCM and HBC.

Two possible reasons for today shocking gains of banking stocks. Firstly, it is the Decree 61 providing appraisal of the starting prices and collateral of NPLs that will come into force in July. Those banks with financial strength and good relationships are expected to benefit from the acquisition of bad debts. Secondly, the amendment and addition to some articles within the Law on Credit Institutions and the draft on the Decree on bad debt resolution will be discussed in the Third Meeting of the National Assembly XIV, which is held today. Our banking analyst will provide investors with a deeper look into these issues in today AP.

While banking stocks surged, real estate stocks behaved quite different. NVL, KDH, and NBB are of the few name that able to keep the gaining momentum. The rest, including TDH, NLG, DXG and DIG all fell today. We think this correction phase of real estate stocks is understandable as these stocks have risen sharply since the beginning of the year. For example, LDG's price hit the floor two day in a row after a surge of 240%. The rally is attributed to a potential extraordinary profit LDG can achieve this year thanks to the projects such as Viva city and, especially, the Grand World project in Phu Quoc Island.

Recommendations:

Indexes soared on rising volumes and broke far away from previous peaks. Money flows focused on bank stocks while real-estate stocks were sold aggressively. Trader should consider raising the proportion of stock on corrections.
