Market today: No Clear Leading Sectors and Stocks

(Thien Bui – Ext: 1321)

VNIndex continued to gain 2.53 pts to close at 968.46 pts. The HNXIndex also closed higher 1.52 pts. Market breadth on both bourses were not very positive. Under the market cap view, large cap stocks tried to balance the VNIndex while small-cap stocks gained the most.

Banking shares such as VCB, BID, STB, CTG, MBB and VPB increased slightly enough to join with VNM and GAS to keep the market from falling further under the pressure of SAB, VIC and VRE. After a sharp drop since Dec 4th, many banking shares are trading quite stable. RongViet Research rates positive for this sector to invest in 2018. Investors can accumulate more banking shares. Oil & Gas sector still kept its momentum as we have mentioned in yesterday's daily news. Most of shares in Natural Rubber sector increased. Rubber price on TOCOM reached 3-month high thanks to the three largest rubber exporters cut down the export until next 2018 March. This is definitely the supporting factor for these shares.

However, as natural rubber price goes up, it is a pressure for the tires producers. Against this fact, our analyst still sees some bright spots for DRC. She just released the report so investors can have more views on this company.

Not all leading sectors and stocks are moving in a same direction. Therefore, market needs to have more time to accumulate to reach higher level.

Macro news:

The GSO has just released its 2017 socio-economic report. Accordingly, GDP in 2017 is estimated to increase by 6.81%. This is a better-than-expected figure since the first two quarters of this year, GDP growth was sluggish, far below target. However, Q3 GDP unexpectedly increased by 7.46% and Q4 GDP even higher than 7.65%, helping GDP in 2017 exceed its target. Macroeconomic panel of RongViet Research will have more comments on the socio-economic picture 2017 next week.
