Market today: Low liquidity is still a concern

(Hieu Nguyen - Ext:1514)

VN-Index rose at the very beginning of the morning session, and increased even further as the time goes on. Gainers overwhelmed decliners (153 versus 57). The blue chips such as VNM, VCB, GAS help lifting the market today, particularly, VNM also received huge demand from foreigners (over VND 108 billion). At the end of today session, both VN-Index, HN-Index and UPCOM-Index well with respective increases of 1.25%, 0.84% and 1.7%. Although markets rallied strongly, liquidity remained low with only 87 million shares trading on the HSX, equivalent to a turnover value of VND 1,800 billion.

Highlights of the day was HAGL and HAGL AGRICO announcing the closing date for their 2016 AGM (August 23rd, 2016). The meeting is expected to be held in mid- September this year. How these companies deal with their debt problem has been the hot topic for the shareholders in the last several months, and they expect to get a satisfying answer in this meeting. Since the beginning of this year, contrary to the rally of the market rally, stocks of these enterprises keep setting new lows. But price of HAG and HNG went ceiling today as investors reacting to the news.

Today, the cash flow somewhat recovered and allocated mostly to Construction & Materials, Real Estate, Seaports and Oil & Gas sector. However, there was not enough signal to confirm whether the market has indeed reversed or this was just another recovery session. Therefore, as we have said yesterday, the market at the moment is only suitable for short-term and high risk-tolerance investors. Meanwhile, investors with long-term vision should remain patient and observe more before opening new positions.
